Qualifications Required

As a Production Runner, you might have administration/secretarial qualifications and have a good typing speed.

Shorthand skills can be useful.

Most Production Runners have GCSEs, including English (A* - C or 9 - 4), A levels or equivalent qualifications, or a higher qualification, such as a HND or degree.

To get onto an Advanced or Higher-Level Apprenticeship, you will usually need at least five GCSEs at A*- C or 9 - 4, including English and maths, and possibly two A Levels.

Some universities accept the Welsh Baccalaureate as equivalent to 1 A level.

Skills and Qualities

To become a Production Runner, you need:

- to be well organised
- good IT skills
- to be energetic and versatile, as you will have a wide variety of tasks to do
- the ability to remain calm under pressure and to react quickly when things go wrong
- the ability to find creative solutions to problems
- a friendly personality and good communication skills
- an interest in broadcasting
- to like travelling away from home a lot

Entry Routes

Having a career as a Production Runner does not need specific requirements.

You do need at least 5 GCSE's graded A* - C or 9 – 4 including English, maths and media especially.

A levels are also useful and could be taken in a relevant subject such as media as this will be helpful for this career.

Another route is taking a course as a BTEC, HNC or HND in a relevant subject such as theatre or television / film / media / radio production.

Salary

The pay rates given below are approximate:

- Starting: £25,500 - £28,500
- With experience: £31,500 - £39,000
- Senior Production Runners earn £42,500

Pay rates for Production Runners depends on the type of production you work on, duration of the project and whether you are employed or self-employed.
